THE financially troubled Sobey Engineering has been placed into liquidation.

The Australian Tax Office was successful in its Federal Court application late last week in Melbourne to wind up the company.

The appointed liquidator Paul Burness, of solvency and forensic accountancy firm Worrells, said his first task would be to recover money from the company's debtors.

A total of 43 debtors owe almost $195,000 to the company.

The assets of the company have already been sold to a new company, Sobey Services, which was formed last week and is operating from the same site in Cellana Court that was previously occupied by Sobey Engineering.
